EDITORIAL MESSAGE

"With you, the child in me grew up again, watching you learn, Learning again was what I gained.

I re-lived innocence, with your charm, with your fervor, my heart grew warm.

O Cherub, you transformed me from a human to a teacher and from a teacher, to a compassionate learner.

With you, I re-cherished the joys of pupilage with you; I took the journey to the unknown, unexplored and the unfathomed prime. WITH YOU, I LEARN TO LEARN!!! "

The bond between the teachers and students is that of mutual love, ascent and everlasting learning experiences. They dwell on each others' experiences and grow with each others' learning.

It is rightly said, "The teacher is the one who gets the most out of the lessons, and the true teacher is the learner." - Elbert Hubbard

This edition of the newsletter brings before you the different hues as experienced by both during the course of surfeit learning activities. A lively expression of the children's expedition from the unplumbed to the ascertained –

We, at Madhusthali have been holding on to our values strongly and are in a continuous quest for instilling the same in our children. Our genuine approach towards the same remains mutual respect. A caring environment; close knit ties between the teacher and the taught and a democratic disposition of ethos at school. These values foster independent and critical thinking, decision making and a humane approach to solve problems.

Taking this opportunity, I on behalf of the management convey our heartiest regards and gratitude to all our parents, well-wishers, teachers and students for the enormous support and will be anticipating the same in the new session as well. My ardent and humble appeal to the parents is to let the support flow. Help us rear our children with the qualities you always wanted to see in them. Let us together, ignite that unique spark in them. Let us together, give wings to their imagination. Let us together, affirm their landings, and strengthen their grounds. And let us together bring up absolute HUMANS.
